Congress for years has tried to limit the use of capital gains as taxavoidance devices. But taxpayers and their lawyers manage to keep well ahead of the game.

SPENDING ENOUGH?

The tendency of too many boards commissions, committees, and governing groups is to make comparisons with the national average when they talk about quality and sufficiency as applied to whatever it is for which they are responsible. This to us is a poor approach.

Also poor is the policy of looking at the neighbors to arrive at a comparison. Recently we heard comments along this line, applied to comparison the Warren library eight cents per capita on their libraries, Warren was spending approximately two dollars.

But Pennsylvania is far down the line when it comes to quality library service. As it is in so many things other than big industry, it lags de- Aim those sights at the highest pressingly behind. There are nearly standards as recommended by leadthirty states out of forty-eight lead- ing authorities and help would be ing this rich commonwealth in the available. amount spent on books for public study and enjoyment.

The national average is about way down by states that are even worse than we. Our expenditure of $2 a person suggests to some that we are doing well, but there are many among us who do not agree.

Included among the discontented have been those in charge of the library service for nearly two decades. Annual reports constantly lament the many lacks, and including poor salary levels, in sufficient trained help, and too little spent on books.

The pattern seldom changes and neither does the board, which goes on, year after year, unperturbed by the reports, and with no apparent effort to correct the problem. Either the members believe there is no solution or they are not sufficiently confident that their librarians know their subject. An inconsistent approach which defies reasoning.

Despite the annual increase in the cost of living, paralleled of course by the cost of operating schools, governments, businesses, and such things as libraries, the Warren library continues to do nothing about its budget. It spent$31,196 in 1952 and checked out $31,649 in 1956.

No business we know can spend the same amount today as it did six years ago and do as efficient a job. No business or government can spend approximately the same on labor today as the amount spent six years ago and expect improvement. No one can spend the same for its basic supply and anticipate as much quality.

In view of this the library budgets are not encouraging. In 1952 it spent $2,598 on general books. In 1957 it spent $2,435 for such books. It must have purchased far less for an even FINANCE COMPANY less amount.

In 1953 the Warren library spent $21,076 on salaries. Last year it spent $22,770. Not enough increase to assure greater efficiency or additional trained help.

The budget last year was up to $41,184, but if we interpret this correctly the $10,000 jump does not represent an increase in current expenditures. Most of the additional neighbors as our guide is not a very money was taken from standing funds alert answer. SPEAK OUT

The description of our national scenery with signboards which border many of our highways has been criticized by most of us over a long period of years. Today the controversy rages in Washington as some attempt to keep these profanations of our landscape off the federally financed highways.

This brave stand by some of our legislators as usual isnot as strongly supported as it is opposed. The national advertising fraternity and all who use it comprise a powerful voice. The general public is not so well organized.

The most potent voice in this matter can be you and the other millions who drive the roads and enjoy that which borders them. It would be a pleasure to leave the magazine rack behind and see something other than ads in color while motoring.

There also is danger here. Anything which cannot be scanned as scenery, but instead requires reading to get the commercial message, is bound to distract attention. If we allow commercial messages to be erected in eye-catching methods along the sides of the roads why not permit television in cars? Both sound like legal murder to us.

We are not afraid of this recession and are confident that we will move out of it before the year is over, but we are alarmed by the obvious confusion in Washington concerning a solution. He Does Something About The Weather!

When severe cold weather strikes, more people want more natural gas. This man, with his complicated gauges and control devices, sees that you get it.

The gauges tell him instantly – and automatically - the signs of increased consumption. In many places, by merely pushing a few buttons, he sends more gas on its way. To meet demands he draws on pipeline gas and his gas storage "bank account"-the vast reserves of natural gas that were stored underground during warm weather by the Columbia Gas System.

This accurate control of your natural gas supply under changing weather conditions is one more reason why this "wonder fuel" is the most dependable you can use. And modern, efficient natural gas serves you best when you use it with modern, automatic gas appliances.

WRONG ANSWERS?

We are inclined to suspect that most of the answers being offered as a solution to the recession are hurry-up panaceas and not well based suggestions that will have a long range effect. We believe this nation is not suffering from a recession so much as it is inflation.

Many good economists believe the recession is the result of steps taken to control inflation. Such steps either are not the best answer or were delayed too long.

Inflation controls which cause financial distress to over five million people are not our answer.

WINDING UP

A campaign goal of $325,000 has been set for the Pittsburgh Symphony orchestra to replenish its maintenance fund and keep the music group alive. The final weeks of the current season start Friday as the orchestra under William Steinberg helps steam up the contributions.

PARTY CONTROL CONTEST

The registrations by candidates for committee posts in the two political parties indicate that there will be some hustling for control of the Democrat organization. In the fifty precincts, thirteen will have contests. Rivalry among the Republicans is lacking, as the incumbents quietly maintain the status quo. The exception is Freehold 1,

By John Crosby . Living Theater on Live Television

The persistent flowering of the theater from Greenwich Village to San Diego was celebrated appropriately on NBC-TV's "Wide a bank repair-loan can help make your home - - PRETTY AS A PICTURE...

1. MAKE PLANS. First, decide on the improvements and repairs you want to make in your home: a new roof, plumbing, heating, any remodeling you want.

2. GET PRICES. A sensible second step is to consult a contractor and supplier of materials and equipment to get complete information on what it will cost you.

3. AND SEE US. Then come to the bank and apply for a home improvement loan. Rates are low and you can repay by the month from income. We'll welcome you.

Our Real Trouble Is Inflation

By William McChesney Martin, Jr. (Chairman, Board of Governors, Federal Reserve System)

WASHINGTON. -- What is troubling our economy now is some after effects of inflation.

It is highly regrettable that we should have been brought to this pass, but it would be fruitless at this point to belabor the subject of what we might have done in the past to better the present.

The important thing now is to deal sanely with today's problems today -- and to remember firmly that when the next economic turn comes, as assuredly it will, the best way to fight deflation is to fight the inflation that leads to it.

In coping with today's problems, it is essential that we recognize that prosperity is not brought about merely by more and more spending. Prosperity can come only from more efficient production and distribution of goods and services at prices that people are able and willing to pay.

Vital as it is to achieve recovery, it is even more vital to insure that it will be a recovery that lasts a recovery that does not merely provide jobs, but lasting jobs. Hence the task before us is not that of finding artificial stimulants that will bring prosperity for one day and a in the economy, as well as to that will endure.

vince of Federal Reserve policy that is to say, in business pricing policies, selling practices, and productive efficiency; in wage bargaining; in various financing arrangements, and in the incentives to consumers to buy.

In the past, price reductions during periods of contraction served to stimulate increased buying and output and thus to contribute to general recovery and expansion. Undoubtedly, lower prices now would prove to have expansive benefits for economic activity generally.

We all share the hope that the recession will be moderate and short-lived, but it is not possible to be completely certain about the future course of economic activity. There is a range of views currently held regarding the duration and extent of this recession, and of the timing and vigor of the ensuing recovery.

In my own view, the underlying strengths of the economy are many. The inflationary trends seem to have halted before creating maladjustments of such severity as to lead to a protracted period of liquidation and structural realignment in the economy. If needed readjustments are promptly made, the current recession may be moderate and short-lived, and healthy revival should set in, progressing to new records of economic performance and new high levels of national well-being.

But let us not be misled into vain hope this will come about without effort on the part of all of us, for much depends upon the speed with which needed readjustments are made.

provide electric power, protect our mineral and timber resources, and guard our precious soil by way of these publicly owned lands.

All organizations this week are asked to give this subject special attention and to undertake projects which will help the public realize the value of this heritage we must not dissipate, but instead should be fighting to expand and preserve.

It has been an uphill fight for many years, with individual greed competing with the public welfare. The preservation and full use of our natural resources in a way that will perpetuate this American civilization into the centuries and guarantee a kind of freedom no other nation ever has enjoyed is one of our major responsibilities.

The public lands represent an effort of those with vision to provide for the many. They are a debt we owe to the few pioneers who looked ahead during the land-grabbing days and gained a few footholds on which to build what we now have.

Ours is a comparatively simple task. And because it does not seem easy to us and presents many difficult problems we should fully appreciate the days before millions of hunting and fishing licenses, supported by millions of outdoors pleasure seekers who want a place to play and unwittingly help a cause that is far greater than creels of trout and bags of game.

Today the need for clean streams is admitted by many who a few years ago would have been associated with groups opposed to such restrictions on industry and cities. Today the stocking of those streams is done in a way that comes far closer to benefitting the entire fishing fraternity than was the case in some years past when a few controlled much of the stocking and did most of the fishing.
